

An Analysis of Aspiration and Expedient Means in Chapter Four of the Lotus Sūtra

Executive Summary

This report provides an in-depth scholarly analysis of the pivotal dialogue in Chapter Four of the Lotus Sūtra between the Buddha and his four senior disciples: Subhūti, Mahā-Kātyāyana, Mahā-Kāśyapa, and Mahā-Maudgalyāyana. This passage serves as a foundational hermeneutical device for Mahayana Buddhism, articulating the revolutionary concept of Ekayāna (the One Vehicle) and illustrating the doctrine of upāya (skillful means). Through their dialogue and the subsequent Parable of the Wayward Son, the disciples come to a profound realization: the Buddha's wisdom is not a secret to be hoarded, but a boundless "storehouse" of Dharma accessible only to those with the appropriate aspiration, or bodhicitta. The report demonstrates how the parable acts as a metaphorical blueprint for spiritual maturation, showing that the path to universal Buddhahood is a process of purifying one's mind of "lowly" thoughts and cultivating the diligence and confidence necessary to receive one's inherent spiritual inheritance.

Introduction: A Sudden Awakening in the Assembly

Chapter Four of the Lotus Sūtra, titled variously as "Faith Discernment," "Belief and Understanding," or "Willing Acceptance," marks a crucial transitional moment in the text.<sup>1</sup> This chapter immediately follows the Parable of the Burning House in Chapter Three and introduces the renowned Parable of the Wayward Son.<sup>1</sup> It is a moment of profound revelation for four senior disciples—Subhūti, Mahā-Kātyāyana, Mahā-Kāśyapa, and Mahā-Maudgalyāyana—who, though highly accomplished, had previously perceived the full Mahayana teachings as a path beyond their reach.<sup>1</sup>

The four disciples are not nascent practitioners but venerable Arhats who had spent decades in sincere practice, mastering the early Buddhist teachings.<sup>1</sup> They are described as having become "tired" from their long efforts and, having attained the "day's pay of nirvana," felt fully satisfied with their accomplishments.<sup>1</sup> Their mindset was characterized by being "mindful of emptiness, signlessness, and wishlessness," yet they explicitly stated that they took "no delight in the Bodhisattva-Dharmas" and harbored no "single thought of longing" for the supreme enlightenment of Buddhahood.<sup>3</sup>

The catalyst for their sudden awakening is the Buddha's unexpected and "very rare" prophecy of Buddhahood for Śāriputra.<sup>3</sup> This event, a teaching they had "never heard before," fills them with a sense of "unanticipated and unexpected" joy, as if they had "obtain[ed] what [they] never have had".<sup>1</sup> This profound shift in their spiritual outlook prompts their famous declaration that, "Although we were your sons then as we are now, we wished to hear only the teachings of the Lesser Vehicle. If we had aspired for the teaching of the Great Vehicle, you would have already expounded it to us".<sup>1</sup> This passage directly addresses the core theme of the query, placing the responsibility for receiving the highest teaching not on the Buddha's generosity, but on the listener's own capacity, disposition, and, most importantly, their aspiration.

Part I: The Limits of Aspiration and the Storehouse of Truth

The dialogue in Chapter Four provides a window into the spiritual mindset of the disciples, which Mahayana Buddhism would later characterize as the "Lesser Vehicle" (Hinayana), a term bearing deprecatory connotations.<sup>5</sup> These disciples viewed the spiritual path as a means to individual salvation, or arhatship, and were content with this goal, believing it represented the ultimate escape from suffering.<sup>2</sup>

The disciples' state of contentment, described as a spiritual weariness after decades of practice, was not a moral failing but a spiritual plateau. They had fulfilled what they believed was the final goal, and in doing so, they had ceased to strive for anything further. This cessation of aspiration, rather than any inherent limitation, served as the primary psychological barrier to their reception of the highest teaching. Their surprise and joy upon hearing Śāriputra's prophecy reveals a profound shift in their self-perception, as the Buddha's words reframe their past accomplishments as mere stages on a much grander, all-encompassing journey. The Buddha's revelation, therefore, did not introduce a new truth; it redefined their existing spiritual identity and purpose.

The Buddha's promise of universal Buddhahood shatters the disciples' limited worldview.<sup>9</sup> Their joyful reaction, likened to receiving "limitless precious gems" without having sought them, signifies a dawning realization that they, too, possess the inherent capacity for supreme, universal enlightenment.<sup>1</sup> This powerful message is central to the Lotus Sūtra—the idea that Buddhahood is not a final, static state but a potential that all individuals can manifest from within their lives.<sup>11</sup> The text's teachings emphasize that Buddhahood is an "eternal and present reality" inherent in every person.<sup>12</sup> The journey is thus an awakening to an inner nature rather than the acquisition of an external state.<sup>13</sup>

This section culminates in the crucial theme identified in the query: the power of aspiration. The disciples themselves admit that their "low resolve" and "lowly desires" prevented them from receiving the full Dharma.<sup>2</sup> This reframes the entire spiritual path, shifting the focus from a purely linear, incremental progression to a process of internal transformation. The key to receiving the highest teaching is not an external decree but an inner readiness, characterized by the cultivation of bodhicitta—the awakened mind that aspires to Buddhahood for the benefit of all beings.<sup>15</sup>

Part II: The Parable of the Wayward Son: A Blueprint for Spiritual Maturation

To clarify their newfound understanding, the four disciples offer the Buddha the Parable of the Wayward Son. The story is a rich and detailed allegory for the disciples' own spiritual journeys and a profound illustration of the Buddha's pedagogical genius.<sup>1</sup>

The parable begins with a wealthy man's son who, in his youth, leaves home and wanders for fifty years, becoming "poor and needy".<sup>2</sup> He eventually, by chance, arrives at his long-lost father's mansion. However, seeing the immense wealth and authority of his father, whom he does not recognize, he is "immediately afraid" and flees.<sup>2</sup> The son's inability to see his true identity reflects his "unambitious" nature and "low self-esteem," which act as veils preventing him from claiming his inheritance.<sup>2</sup>

The father, who represents the Buddha, recognizes his son but also perceives his "inferior and lowly" will.<sup>2</sup> Out of compassion, he devises a long-term plan, a perfect example of upāya or skillful means. He sends two retainers, dressed in "shabby clothes," to offer the son the menial job of "sweeping dung" at twice the usual wage.<sup>2</sup> The son happily accepts and toils for twenty years. During this time, the father, disguised in worn clothes, works alongside his son, gradually earning his trust and eventually promoting him to a position of managing the household finances.<sup>1</sup> The son, still considering himself a "lowly worker from outside," is finally revealed to be the true heir just before the father's death.<sup>2</sup>

The allegory is clear: the wealthy father is the Buddha, and the wayward son represents all sentient beings and, specifically, the senior disciples.<sup>2</sup> The father's great wealth is the "storehouse of the Thus Come One's knowledge and vision".<sup>3</sup> The act of "sweeping dung" symbolizes the process of purifying one's mind of "frivolous discussions of the Dharma" and negative karma.<sup>2</sup> This task, performed for two decades with diligence, humility, and patience, is the necessary process of spiritual maturation that transforms the son from a "lowly" vagabond into a person capable of managing and inheriting the ultimate Dharma.<sup>1</sup>

The father's use of upāya is a core philosophical lesson of the parable. Upāya is defined as a pedagogical tool—a "skillful adaptation of his teaching methods to specific audiences".<sup>20</sup> The father's action is not a deceitful lie but a compassionate strategy to meet his son on his own terms and guide him toward his destiny.<sup>22</sup> The father recognized that an immediate bestowal of the inheritance would have overwhelmed his son, causing him to flee in terror once more. This demonstrates a nuanced understanding of compassion: it is not merely giving someone what they want, but providing them with the tools and process to become who they can be. The job as a cleaner was not the goal; it was the transformative process that cultivated the humility and confidence necessary for the son to receive his birthright.

A comparison with the Christian Parable of the Prodigal Son in the Gospel of Luke highlights the unique philosophical premises of the Buddhist narrative. The following table illustrates the key distinctions:

Feature	The Wayward Son (Lotus Sūtra)	The Prodigal Son (Gospel of Luke)
Source	Lotus Sūtra , Chapter 4 <sup>23</sup>	Gospel of Luke, Chapter 15 <sup>24</sup>
Son's Departure	Leaves home aimlessly, without inheritance <sup>19</sup>	Requests and squanders his inheritance <sup>24</sup>
Father's Motivation	To secure an heir and prevent his vast wealth from being lost <sup>2</sup>	Unconditional love and forgiveness <sup>24</sup>
Son's Return	By chance, does not recognize his father <sup>2</sup>	Conscious, repentant return to seek mercy <sup>24</sup>

Father's Response	A long-term, patient strategy of upāya to cultivate his son's character <sup>2</sup>	An immediate, joyous celebration and feast <sup>24</sup>
Role of Labor	A necessary period of spiritual purification and character cultivation <sup>1</sup>	A position of servitude is offered but immediately refused by the father's grace <sup>24</sup>
Primary Theme	Spiritual maturation and the cultivation of inner capacity <sup>25</sup>	Unconditional divine forgiveness and grace <sup>24</sup>

The Christian parable is a testament to sola gratia, where salvation is a free gift received upon repentance and confession. The father's love is an overwhelming force that overrides any need for the son to earn his way back; he "runs to his wayward son" and "cuts him off" before he can finish his plea for mercy.<sup>26</sup> In contrast, the Buddhist parable emphasizes self-cultivation and a necessary process. The "inheritance" is an innate potential, but one must become capable of receiving it. The Buddhist father, while overjoyed, recognizes his son's "lowly nature" and understands that an immediate bestowal of the inheritance would be counterproductive.<sup>3</sup> This demonstrates a fundamental difference in soteriology: one is a model of immediate, unconditional grace, while the other is a model of a progressive path, where grace is expressed through patient, tailored guidance that prepares the individual for the ultimate truth.

Part III: From Provisional Teachings to the One Vehicle

The Parable of the Wayward Son serves to illuminate the Lotus Sūtra's central, unifying doctrine: Ekayāna, or the One Vehicle. This doctrine asserts that the three distinct "vehicles"—the Śrāvakayāna (the path of the voice-hearer), the Pratyekabuddhayāna (the path of the solitary Buddha), and the Bodhisattvayāna (the path of the compassionate being)—are not separate destinations but are upāya, or expedient means, that ultimately lead to a single, supreme goal: the "One Vehicle of Buddhahood".<sup>6</sup>

This doctrine also functions as a polemic device, reframing earlier Buddhist teachings not as "wrong" or "inferior" but as provisional, necessary stages for those who were not yet ready to receive the highest truth.<sup>21</sup> The parable is a perfect metaphorical illustration of this principle. The son's initial work as a menial laborer represents the

Śrāvakayāna—the path of personal purification and "sweeping away the dung" of mental afflictions.<sup>3</sup> His subsequent promotion to a position of trust and managerial responsibility represents the

Bodhisattvayāna—the path of altruistic action and working for the benefit of the father's estate.<sup>1</sup> Both of these stages, however, were always part of the single, pre-ordained path to his full inheritance—the one vehicle of becoming a co-owner of the estate.<sup>3</sup> The Buddha's use of these provisional teachings is a compassionate act, a strategy to attract and guide beings toward the ultimate and only true goal: Buddhahood.<sup>31</sup>

This journey also underscores the importance of bodhicitta as the essential prerequisite for the highest teachings. Bodhicitta is the "awakened mind" that embodies the "aspiration to achieve Buddhahood for the benefit of all beings".<sup>15</sup> The disciples' realization, as expressed in their dialogue, that the highest teaching was previously inaccessible to them due to a lack of longing for it, directly links the external act of teaching to the internal state of mind of the recipient.<sup>3</sup> The disciples' sudden awakening is a form of aspiration bodhicitta—the wish to attain Buddhahood after having been content with a lesser goal.<sup>32</sup>

This synthesis of upāya, the Parable of the Wayward Son, and the doctrine of Ekayāna leads to the most radical claim of the Lotus Sūtra: the inherent Buddhahood of all beings. The parable and the overarching philosophical framework together suggest that Buddhahood is not an external state to be acquired through a long, incremental process of virtue.<sup>13</sup> Instead, it is an "eternal and present reality" and an "infinite potential and dignity inherent in each human life".<sup>11</sup> The path is therefore one of "awakening" to this inner nature, not of acquiring something that was previously absent.<sup>13</sup>

Conclusion: A Joyful Inheritance Gained

The analysis of Chapter Four of the Lotus Sūtra reveals a profound and interconnected narrative of spiritual transformation. The Buddha's compassion is expressed not through a sudden, unconditional bestowal of grace, but through the perfect use of upāya, a patient and tailored pedagogical approach that guides individuals on a journey of self-cultivation. The disciples' initial contentment and their subsequent joyful awakening illustrate that the primary obstacle to the highest teaching is not a lack of capacity but a lack of aspiration. The Parable of the Wayward Son serves as a timeless and deeply resonant metaphor for this process, mapping the journey from a state of "lowly" self-perception to the realization of one's true, inherent spiritual identity.

The passage's overarching philosophical framework, Ekayāna, unifies all provisional teachings into a single, ultimate path to Buddhahood. It demonstrates that the seemingly disparate goals of personal liberation and altruistic action are, in fact, integral stages on a single journey. The Buddha's wisdom, as revealed in the Lotus Sūtra, is not a secret to be revealed but a universal, ever-present reality.<sup>10</sup> Its full depth and richness are accessible only when the individual cultivates the necessary aspiration—not a passive wish, but a transformative force that leads to diligent, humble practice. The disciples' joyful realization that "the great jewels of the Dharma King have come to us of themselves" is the ultimate testament to the profound truth that Buddhahood is not a distant, external prize, but a joyous inheritance waiting to be claimed from within.<sup>3</sup>

Works cited

1. The Lotus Sutra – Chapter 4 – Faith Discernment | Celestial Drum ..., accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.adirondacktendai.org/the-lotus-sutra/the-lotus-sutra-chapter-4-faith-discernment/>
2. Lotus Sutra Chapter 4: Parable of the "Lost Vagabond Son ...., accessed September 8, 2025, <https://buddhaweekly.com/lotus-sutra-chapter-4-parable-of-the-lost-vagabond-son-second-of-seven-parables-full-english-translation/>
3. Lotus Sutra - Chapter 4, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.buddhistdoor.com/OldWeb/resources/sutras/lotus/sources/lotus4.htm>
4. The White Lotus of the Good Dharma / 84000 Reading Room, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://84000.co/translation/toh113>
5. Buddhism : The three vehicles - One Little Angel, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.onelittleangel.com/wisdom/quotes/buddhism.asp?level=3>
6. Question on some vehicles. : r/Buddhism - Reddit, accessed September 8, 2025, https://www.reddit.com/r/Buddhism/comments/17nwjfn/question\_on\_some\_vehicles/
7. Hinayana and Mahayana: Comparison — Study Buddhism, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://studybuddhism.com/en/advanced-studies/abhidharma-tenet-systems/comparison-of-buddhist-traditions/hinayana-and-mahayana-comparison>
8. Hinayana and Mahayana: Significance and symbolism, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.wisdomlib.org/concept/hinayana-and-mahayana>
9. The Lotus Sutra - Bucknell Digital Commons, accessed September 8, 2025, https://digitalcommons.bucknell.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1238&context=fac\_pubs
10. "Realizing This World as the Buddha Land" (2009) - Princeton University, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.princeton.edu/~jstone/Articles%20on%20the%20Lotus%20Sutra%20Tendai%20and%20Nichiren%20Buddhism/Realizing%20This%20World%20as%20the%20Buddha%20Land.pdf>

0the%20Buddha%20Land%20\(2009\).pdf

11. Buddhism and the Lotus Sutra | Daisaku Ikeda Official Website, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://www.daisakuikeda.org/main/philos/buddhist/buddh-02.html>
12. Lotus Sutra | Soka Gakkai (global), accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://www.sokaglobal.org/about-the-soka-gakkai/buddhist-lineage/lotus-sutra.html>
13. Chapter 4: Nichiren Daishonin and the Lotus Sutra | Soka Gakkai (global), accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://www.sokaglobal.org/resources/study-materials/buddhist-study/the-basics-of-nichiren-buddhism-for-the-new-era-of-worldwide-kosen-rufu/chapter-4.html>
14. Teaching Tips from the Lotus Sutra, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://commons.stmarytx.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1314&context=facarticles>
15. Mahayana mind: Significance and symbolism, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://www.wisdomlib.org/concept/mahayana-mind>
16. Buddhahood aspiration: Significance and symbolism, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.wisdomlib.org/concept/buddhahood-aspiration>
17. Bodhicitta, Bodhi-citta: 13 definitions - Wisdom Library, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.wisdomlib.org/definition/bodhicitta>
18. parable of the wealthy man and his poor son - Nichiren Buddhism Library, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.nichirenlibrary.org/en/dic/Content/P/19>
19. buddhaweekly.com, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://buddhaweekly.com/lotus-sutra-chapter-4-parable-of-the-lost-vagabond-son-second-of-seven-parables-full-english-translation/#:~:text=His%20waywar%20son%20is%20unambitious,family's%20mansion%20that%20he%20escapes>
20. Upāya - Buddhism - Oxford Bibliographies, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.oxfordbibliographies.com/abstract/document/obo-9780195393521/obo-9780195393521-0282.xml>
21. Upaya - Wikipedia, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Upaya>
22. Skillful Means: The Buddhist Teaching on How to Share Your Wisdom - Part 1, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://brightwayzen.org/skillful-means-upaya/>
23. Let me first thank the Soka Cultural Association of France, the, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://buddhism.lib.ntu.edu.tw/FULLTEXT/JR-MAG/mag576215.pdf>
24. Parable of the Prodigal Son | EBSCO Research Starters, accessed September 8, 2025,
<https://www.ebsco.com/research-starters/religion-and-philosophy/parable-prodigal-son>
25. Parable Comparison - Father Mark White Blog - WordPress.com, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://frmarkdwhite.wordpress.com/2010/03/13/parable-comparison/>
26. What is the meaning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son? | GotQuestions.org, accessed September 8, 2025,

<https://www.gotquestions.org/parable-prodigal-son.html>

27. Post-1 - Buddha-Nature, accessed September 8, 2025,
https://buddhanature.tsadra.org/index.php/Recent\_Essays/Post-1

28. One vehicle - Encyclopedia of Buddhism, accessed September 8, 2025,
https://encyclopediaofbuddhism.org/wiki/One\_vehicle

29. replacement of the three vehicles with the one vehicle | Dictionary of Buddhism, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.nichirenlibrary.org/en/dic/Content/R/38>

30. The Single Vehicle (ekayāna) in the Avaivartikacakrasūtra and Lotus sūtra - ResearchGate, accessed September 8, 2025,
https://www.researchgate.net/publication/344262865\_The\_Single\_Vehicle\_ekayan\_a\_in\_the\_Avaivartikacakrasutra\_and\_Lotus\_sutra

31. Parable of the burning house - Encyclopedia of Buddhism, accessed September 8, 2025, https://encyclopediaofbuddhism.org/wiki/Parable\_of\_the\_burning\_house

32. Teachings on Bodhicitta | Khenpo Sherab Sangpo - Bodhicitta Sangha, accessed September 8, 2025, <https://www.bodhicittasangha.org/teaching-on-bodhicitta/>